

CJ

We adopted CJ who was still tiny, about 8 wks, and had been out on her own. She didn't know what being part of a family was or what living in a house was all about. At first she tried to convince her new Big Brother Sparky he should go away. Fortunately he is loving and very patient. They now have everything worked out and have a playful, loving relationship. From day 1 she wanted to be up high so, she managed to flip her new bed over (even though it was several times as big as her) and sleep on top of it not in it. She still prefers this as you can tell by the photo. We made a good choice and look forward to a long life together.
