

Rosey and Dobby

Mark and I adopted Rosey from the SA Humane Society in August 2012. We had just moved in together and had talked about getting our first dog together. He's always had a dog growing up, but I've never had a dog in my life. I was sort of hesitant on getting a dog because of the responsibilities involved in taking care of one, but when we arrived at the SA Humane Society my mind changed instantly. I saw all these dogs that needed a home and wanted to take them all back! But we had seen Rosey, and she was the first dog that jumped up at us when we approached her kennel. She had been at the SA Humane Society for over a year, and just hearing that I wanted to take her home instantly.

She was really shy and reclusive at first, but overtime she came to show us plenty of love and affection.

She can still be an aloof dog at times, but ever since we adopted Dobby in December she's developed a "sibling rivalry" attitude and has definitely broken out of her shell.

In the end, she loves him. © Thank you SA Humane Society!
