

Django

My husband and I adopted Pablo (now Django) from the Humane Society back in February, after he'd been there for going on two months. At first, he was pretty aggressive and we couldn't even pet him without being swatted at. We tried everything we were told to help him and nothing was working until we rescued two sick, little kittens. As soon as we introduced them to Django, he took on a whole new persona as a "Cat Dad". He bathed them until they learned how, he constantly cuddled them to sleep, and played with them nonstop. Now the three of them are inseparable and Django is finally happy in his new home. I am so thankful that we decided to adopt him. Our family wouldn't be whole without him.
