

Oyster

I adopted Oyster five months ago, and the difference between then and now is astounding. When she first came home, she was terrified of car rides and she only knew how to sit on command. Now, she loves car rides, and she can lay down and jump on command as well! She's also getting to be a bit more social with other dogs, and over the last week or two especially, she's becoming more open with physical affection like licking. She's always liked snuggling with me, but she now she never leaves my lap or under my arm. I'm so glad I brought her home and into my life—I can't imagine my life without her! Oyster and her papa are going to be together for quite some time!
