

Roxi and Tank

My family and I went to your Home for the Pawlidayz event a year ago today. I went in hopes of finding a “little” fur baby. We already had one - Tank, whom we adopted from y’all 3 years ago and felt he needed a playmate. I’ve never been a fan of “big” dogs. We looked and looked and I didn’t really see a baby the size I was wanting. My husband and sons found a pretty black and white baby who was bigger than I like. She looked very scared. I believe y’all called her Lorelei. I agreed to take her out to see not only how she was but how I would do. She was very scared, timid! Wouldn’t really move away from me and wouldn’t allow any of my guys to get next to her. We spent a good amount of time with her. My husband even left to go get Tank to see how he would do with her. They didn’t seem to mind each other at all.

I agreed to adopt her. Best decision ever!!! I love her so much. It was a struggle in the beginning with her as she wouldn't respond to or allow anyone next to her. She backed away if you made sudden moves in her direction. But with time and lots of love..... She is very different today from a year ago. She looooooves to cuddle with any of us. She looks forward to any of my guys walking in the house and jumps on them with pure excitement. And She loves to play with her brother Tank! She's very very affectionate and nothing like she was when we brought her home.

We absolutely adore her and are soooo glad we were able to give her a forever home! Thank y'all!!
