

From Jessica Ruggiero: Barlow

"My husband and I adopted our new dog a couple of weeks ago. His name originally was Barlow, but we have decided to call him Mac. He was at the Humane Society when he was a little 7lb pup. He was adopted and found his way back to the Humane Society. Thank goodness he was given the second chance. Mac fit right in at his new home. Once he falls asleep, there is nothing that can wake him. Mac loves the couch and has to have his head on a pillow...for extra comfort of course. He can be hanging halfway off of the bed completely asleep! His first trip to Petco was a huge deal to him. He was completely over stimulated. He has a great abundance of toys and chewies. Our cat Kitty wasn't too fond of him at first, but now they lay on the couch next to each other. Mac just wanted to sniff his butt and see what he's been up to and stuff. Mac has been a great addition to our little family. He has a great personality and loves everyone. He has such a sad look on his face even though he's so happy. He has already learned many tricks and is very polite. He doesn't realize how big he is and wants to sit on our laps. The vet says he is a greyhound mix. Just all legs. That's great for our very long walks! We love Mac and love his stupid maneuvers. Just today while outside, he was stretching with his butt in the air and decided it would be awesome to just fall over to his side. Just dropped onto the grass and layed there. He always is ready to make us laugh. Thanks for allowing us to make Mac a permanent part of our family. I've attached two photos of Mac. One chilling on the couch on his pillow, and the other is him pigging out on a chewy."
