

Good morning! I have another update on Oyster since June 11 marked two years since I brought her home.

Oyster has been with me through a lot of life changes, and every day with her is another day with my best friend. When I first brought her home, she was very reactive toward other dogs, but over the past few months, she's gotten much better, and in December, our family expanded with the addition of Pearl, a puppy whose siblings ended up at the Humane Society themselves. Since bringing Pearl home, Oyster has become much more sociable, and even though she's about eight years old now, I can see the puppy that she once was.

They're close friends and playmates, and frequently get into trouble together. Seeing Oyster make a new friend and take on the role of a surrogate mother to Pearl has been hugely rewarding, and their favorite games are "Chase Pearl" and tug-o-war. We also recently moved from a tiny apartment to a house with a big backyard, and Oyster loves laying in the grass and sunning herself all day long. We're looking forward to many long years together!
